

NEW BAGGAGE ACT

Railroad Authorities Busy Explaining New Rule.

To Relieve Railroads From Payment of Liability.

Railroad authorities are now busy explaining the new baggage rules which will be placed into effect Wednesday. To the average short distance traveler who carries little baggage, the rules are a simple matter. It is understood that statements of valuation must be made in all cases, but persons in the habit of taking large, elaborate and expensive wardrobes with them, and salesmen who carry a number of trunks, had better take a day off, hire an expert accountant and do some figuring. Coming on top of income tax returns the new regulations are really a serious matter.

In the first place the value of all baggage must be declared in writing before the railroad company will accept it. The passenger will be furnished with a printed slip for this purpose and it must be filled out by the passenger without assistance from the baggage agent. The agent may inform the passenger as to the rules and the limits on weight and valuation but the amount of the latter must be determined by the passenger who must also sign the slip before the baggage will be accepted.

150 Pounds of Baggage Allowed.
Any baggage will be accepted and checked without charge which does not weigh over 150 pounds and on which a valuation of $100 or less is placed. If the baggage weighs more than 150 pounds, the free liability assumed by the railroad company is at the rate of 75 cents per pound, but only the excess weight is charged for. For example, if a trunk weighs 180 pounds, the railroad will accept responsibility for the extra value of thirty pounds at 75 cents per pound, but will charge for the excess weight of thirty pounds. If the declared value of baggage is above $100 the excess valuation is charged for at the rate of 10 cents per hundred dollars. No baggage will be accepted with a declared value of over $2,500, and the maximum liability accepted by the railroads on baggage which is not locked is $25.

The primary object of the new regulations is said to be to relieve the railroad companies of the liability of paying out heavy sums for baggage that is lost. In the past it is said that the railroads have frequently paid out hundreds of dollars for baggage which was actually worth only a few dollars. The new regulations have been adopted by the Western Passenger association and will be effective on all western railroads. It is said, at least on all the roads in Kansas. The same rules have been in force in the east for several years.

ASSESSORS READY FOR WORK

All Deputies Will Meet at Court House Tomorrow.

March probably will come in like a lion, according to the weather man, but it will also usher in the assessor. All the deputy assessors will meet at the office of F. C. Bowen, county assessor, tomorrow to get their books and final instructions for their work. The work of valuating all the earthly possessions of Shawnee county will then begin at once.

The law provides that property owners must list with the assessor all property owned by them at its actual value. It is also especially urged that every owner give the assessor correct figures regarding agriculture, livestock and commercial enterprises in order that the statistics thus compiled may be reliable.
